Bayer strives for gender parity in all management levels by 2030, advances overall inclusion and diversity approach

Leverkusen, February 22, 2021 – Bayer is further strengthening its efforts to foster a more inclusive and diverse workforce and culture. By 2025, the company aspires to establish a 50/50 gender balance as an average across all combined management levels including lower and middle management (currently 40 percent women and 60 percent men). In the Group Leadership Circle (Top 540), which includes the Group Executive Circle (Top 75), the proportion of women is to be at least 33 percent by 2025 (currently 23 percent). By 2030, Bayer aspires to reach gender parity on each individual management level.

“Our sharpened talent management approach for identifying, attracting, developing, promoting and retaining talent will create an even more inclusive and diverse workforce that makes us a better company overall with an increased attractiveness as an employer of choice. Our goal of gender parity in management is also in line with our commitments to the UN Women’s Empowerment Principles and the G20 Empower Pledge,” says Werner Baumann, Chairman of the Board of Management of Bayer AG.

"As we accelerate the transformation of Bayer, we will fully embrace the power of inclusion, equity and diversity,” says Sarena Lin, new Chief Transformation and Talent Officer at Bayer. “People are always at the center of this journey. I am excited to be working with our colleagues around the world to further advance our talent management approach. It will be applied broadly, fairly and in compliance with all applicable employment laws and regulations worldwide and across all management teams in Bayer.”

Bayer has the aspiration to significantly strengthen other elements of inclusion and diversity as well. For example, the composition of top management will increasingly reflect the national and cultural background of Bayer’s business footprint. All generations are to be represented appropriately within Bayer. The interests of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender employees will continue to be advocated at Board of Management level. The company will continue its efforts to advance regionally defined diversity elements such as ethnicity and race at the country level. Moreover, Bayer strives to increase the proportion of people with disabilities in the workforce to more than 5 percent by 2030. In Germany, for example, it is currently 4.5 percent. Bayer recently joined the global initiative “The Valuable 500,” which advocates greater inclusion of people with disabilities in business enterprises.
